The 5th Cascadia Grains Conference will bring together 300 farmers, bakers, brewers, distillers, brokers, investors, policy-makers and others to strengthen the role of grains in the agricultural and food economy of the maritime Pacific Northwest. The two-day long event features field trips, workshops and hands-on classes that focus on three value-added grain enterprises: poultry and livestock feed, brewing and distilling, and artisan baking. Over the last four years the conference has developed into key educational event for producers and end-users and a wonderful opportunity to network and collaborate along the value chain.

Bottom right: Heidi Behrends-Cerniwey (City of Tumwater) leading a portion of the South Puget Sound Brewing and Distilling Tour.

In 2016 nearly 300 participants from Washington, Oregon, British Columbia, and beyond attended the conference. The wide variety of speakers and workshop topics help to bring a diverse group of grain producers, researchers, and end users to the event.
